Group Conversions Made Easier with SLI

SLi | SPECIALTY LIFE INSURANCE

- Canadian employees leaving their group plans instantly expose themselves and their families to a few immediate and possibly significant financial risks.
- Most Canadian employees rely solely on their employer to provide them with a Group Life Insurance Plan. However, people do not realize that upon leaving their employment, they are also leaving their group life insurance plan and consequently are left without any coverage at all.
- Although most group insurance carriers offer various conversion options, these can be very expensive and may offer unfavourable conversion privileges.
- Typically, people leaving their group plans are at an age, and possibly have a health status, that may make it more difficult to obtain individual plan coverage.
- At Specialty Life (SLi), we looked at this issue impacting many Canadians and wanted to provide an alternative solution.
- With SLi, anyone younger than age 79 can qualify for permanent Life Insurance coverage, whatever their age or health status.
- We offer an individual insurance plan with more favourable premiums than most group conversion options and do not require a medical exam.
- Lastly, SLi strives to offer clients more freedom and an easier transition from Group Life Insurance coverage to an Individual Life policy suited to the policyholder.
